INTRODUCTION

The National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect (NCCAN), created by the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (P.L. 93-247) and located in the Children's Bureau of the Department of Health and Human Services, acts as the principal focus for federal activity in developing policies, plans, and programs relating to the prevention, identification, and treatment of child abuse and neglect.

Virtually every activity of the National Center, in the performance of its mandate, involves the gathering and dissemination of information. Special emphasis has been focused on gathering information on current research and ongoing programs, as well as laws, public awareness materials, and training materials. This information comprises the data base for a computerized information retrieval system which is used by the National Center to answer requests for child abuse and neglect information from program planners, policy makers, researchers, and the general public.

This edition of Child Abuse and Neglect Audiovisual Materials contains information about recent videotapes, films, slides, and multimedia packages, and other audiovisual materials. These were identified through a variety of sources, and many were donated by child abuse and neglect programs throughout the country. There are over 354 items identified and described in this publication. Only items which were actually reviewed are included. The section "How to Use This Catalogue" tells how the audiovisual items are described.

In its continuing efforts to maintain an up-to-date, comprehensive listing of currently available and actively used audiovisual materials, the National Center would like to be notified about materials that are missing from this edition of Child Abuse and Neglect Audiovisual Materials. Send notifications to:

The National Center is also continually seeking actual copies of additional audiovisual materials, and welcomes donations of such materials, or their loan for review.

You can help the National Center improve the usefulness of Child Abuse and Neglect Audiovisual Materials by suggesting changes that should appear in future editions or supplements. A reader-response postcard has been printed inside the back cover.

HOW TO USE THIS CATALOGUE

Child Abuse and Neglect Audiovisual Materials has two major sections. In the first section are descriptions of the items arranged by medium and, within medium, by producer. The items are also listed in sequence by their 5-digit accession numbers (for example, CA-00124). These accession numbers are displayed throughout indexes appearing in the second section of Child Abuse and Neglect Audiovisual Materials. Each item is uniformly identified and described by the elements labeled in the sample below.

Abstract
CA-00003
Brigham Young Univ., Provo, Utah.
Cipher in the Snow.
color 16mm film (23 min.)
1973
Available from: Brigham Young University, Media Marketing W-STAD, Provo, UT 84602
Purchase price: $265; Rental price: $14 for first day, $2 for each additional day
A dramatization of a true story of a boy who dies suddenly of no apparent cause reconstructs the boy's life and emphasizes the need of every child for love and attention. A teacher investigating the boy's school records found that the boy became inattentive and listless in school at about the time his parents were experiencing marital difficulties; he was a victim of emotional neglect, both at home and in school. The film ends on an optimistic note, with the teacher vowing never again to let a child be so forgotten.

The grouping of items in this catalogue corresponds to media. Multimedia training packages and public awareness kits account for a large proportion of the items, however, and a separate category, "Multimedia Packages," is used for these. The descriptions of these packages include, when appropriate, cross-references to other materials. For example, if a training package uses a film that is described under "Films," the abstract of the training package will include a cross-reference like the following: "For a description of the film, see Abstract CA-00005."

Parents Anonymous.
1978.
Administration for Children, Youth and Families (DHEW), 400 6th St. S.W., Washington, DC 20201

Leonard Lieber, the national director of Parents Anonymous, discusses the role of self-help groups in stemming child abuse and neglect. Group therapy sessions are shown, in which parents describe their experiences and work out unpleasant feelings. This is one of a series of television news feature clips on programs sponsored by the Administration for Children, Youth and Families.

CA-00005
American Broadcasting Co., Inc., New York, N.Y.
Children in Peril.
color 16mm film (22 min.)
1972.
Available from: Xerox Films, 1250 Fairwood Ave., Columbus, OH 43216
Purchase price: $335

Statistics are provided on the incidence of child abuse and neglect, and experts in the field discuss the causes, the psychology of abusive parents, and legal aspects. Treatment modalities, such as Mothers Anonymous, child protection teams, the use of lay therapists, group therapy, and specialized day care facilities are depicted. The characteristics of the abusive parent, and situations leading to abuse are noted. Comments by actual abusive mothers are included.

CA-00006
American Broadcasting Co., Inc., New York, N.Y.
Children: A Case of Neglect.
color 16mm film (56 min.)
1974.
Available from: MacMillan Films, Inc., 34 South MacQueston Parkway, Mt. Vernon, NY 10550
Purchase price: $600; Rental price: $55

The myths and realities of health care for American children of families who find it difficult to meet basic medical costs are examined. The film notes that many of the health problems facing children are readily correctable, but, if left untreated, they may hinder learning, inhibit normal growth, and, in extreme cases, cause permanent damage. The in-depth investigation of the government's record in the child health care field examines conditions across the country, from major cities to remote mountain communities.

Association of Junior Leagues of America, New York, N.Y.
Television Spots on Child Abuse.
color 16mm film (2 60 sec.; 4 30 sec.)
1976.
Available from: Association of Junior Leagues of America, 825 Third Ave., New York, NY 10022
Purchase price: $250.00 (Television and Radio Spots)

The series of four spots emphasizes that child abuse and neglect occur in every community and that help is available. The first spot (60 sex.) depicts a man with his head in his hands agonizing over striking his daughter during a recent rage. The scene ends by focusing on a doll on the floor, limbs akimbo. A 30-second version of this spot is also available. The second spot provides statistics on child abuse and neglect and is accompanied by playground scenes. The third spot shows a tear running slowly down a young girl's face, while the narrator provides information on child abuse and neglect. The fourth spot depicts a young mother and baby playing under a tree, while statistics on child abuse and neglect are provided by the narrator.

Brigham Young Univ., Provo, Utah.
Cipher in the Snow.
color 16mm film (23 min.)
1973.
Available from: Brigham Young University, Media Marketing W-STAD, Provo, UT 84602
Purchase price: $255; Rental price: $14 for first day, $2 for each additional day

A dramatization of a true story of a boy who dies suddenly of no apparent cause reconstructs the boy's life and emphasizes the need of every child for love and attention. A teacher investigating the boy's school records found that the boy became inattentive and listless in school at about the time his parents were experiencing marital difficulties; he was a victim of emotional neglect, both at home and in school. The film ends on an optimistic note, with the teacher vowing never again to let a child be so forgotten.

1976.
Available from: Australian Information Service, 636 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10020
Purchase price: $572; Rental price: $12.50

The case of a young mother whose inability to cope with daily stress results in child abuse is dramatized. Contributing factors include social isolation, family and household stress, and a fussy, premature child, the result of an unwanted and uncomfortable pregnancy. Requests for help to her husband, doctor, mother, and neighbor are ignored.

CA-00011
California State Office of the Attorney General, Sacramento.
Child Abuse and the Police.
color 16mm film (29 min.)
1974.
Available from: AIMS Instructional Media Services, Inc., 626 Justin Ave., Glendale, CA 91201
Purchase price: $415; Rental price: free to law enforcement or state agencies for 2 days

The film depicts an incident of child abuse in the home and subsequent investigation by the police. Background information is provided on personal problems which may lead to abuse. Specific laws relating to child abuse are reviewed, as well as the legal responsibilities of the investigating officer. The ways in which a special team of doctors and police officers determine that a child's injuries are the result of abuse are also noted.

CA-00012
Canadian Broadcasting Corp., Toronto (Ontario).
Twelve and a Half Cents.
color 16mm film or videotape (40 min.)
1976.
Available from: Canadian Broadcasting Corp., 22 Front St. W., Toronto, Ontario, Canada
Purchase price: $300

A dramatization of an abusive family situation is presented. Factors which contributed to the abuse include marital strife and financial problems. Abuse of the mother of a child is also depicted. A teacher's observations of a grade school girl's numerous injuries and his subsequent attempts to alert officials to the possibility of abuse are noted. Inadequate followup by officials and the refusal by the neighbors to become involved are shown. The final scene deals with the deaths of the girl and her infant sibling.

CA-00013
Cavalcade Productions.
Barb: Breaking the Cycle of Abuse.
color 16mm film (28 min.)
1977.
Available from: National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect (DHEW), P.O. Box 1182, Washington, DC 20013

The film is a revised version of "Don't Give Up On Me" (Abstract CA-00008). Increased emphasis is placed on the abusive mother, her feelings toward the protective service workers, her feelings toward her children, and her guilt feelings. New sequences deal with a weekend self-help therapy group in which Barb participates. The film ends with a statement by a lay person who participated in the film, regarding her initial feelings toward abusive parents and the insight she gained into the personal problems that may lead to abuse.

CA-00014

Childhood Sexual Abuse.
color 16mm film (50 min.)
1977.
Available from: Motorola Teleprograms, Inc., 4825 N. Scott St., Schiller Park, IL 60176
Purchase price: $750

In-depth case studies of 4 victims of childhood sexual abuse are presented. The women describe their abuse experiences during a weekend reality therapy group, in an attempt to relive and begin to cope with their feelings about the abuse.

CA-00015
Cavalcade Productions.
Don't Give Up on Me.
color 16mm film (29 min.)
1975.
Available from: Motorola Teleprograms, Inc., 4825 N. Scott St., Schiller Park, IL 60176
Purchase price: $375; Rental price: $50 per week

The film depicts a case of child abuse and the way in which the mother is helped through a multidisciplinary team approach. The case is followed from the initial complaint to the police, the court hearing, follow-up by a social worker, and Parents Anonymous workshops. The film creates empathetic identification with the parent. The accompanying instructor's manual outlines the goals of the film and provides guidelines for leading group discussions and applying the film's themes.

CA-00016
Cavalcade Productions.
Double Jeopardy.
color 16mm film (40 min.) or 3/4" videocassette
1978.
Available from: Motorola Teleprograms, Inc., 4825 N. Scott St., Schiller Park, IL 60176
Purchase price: $595; Rental price: $75

Several cases of sexual assault are followed to illustrate the numerous interviews, disbelief, prolonged adjudication, and demeaning cross-examination to which child victims are subjected. The need for professionals to understand the child's embarrassment, the dynamics of sexual abuse, and child developmental stages is stressed. Preparation for and techniques of interviewing are reviewed, as well as a prosecutor's case preparation and courtroom techniques. The importance and role of the child advocate are also discussed.

CA-00017
Cavalcade Productions.
Interviewing the Abused Child.
1978.
Available from: Motorola Teleprograms, Inc., 4825 N. Scott St., Schiller Park, IL 60176

A doctor, a social worker, and a teacher conduct a total of 5 case interviews to demonstrate different techniques used by professionals in interviewing abused and neglected children. The importance of establishing rapport with the child is stressed, and the use of toys to relax the child as well as elicit information is noted. The need for the interviewer to consider the child's developmental stage, to respond to the child, and to handle his own feelings is discussed. An instructor's guide accompanies the film.

CA-00018
Cavalcade Productions.
The Last Taboo.
color 16mm film (30 min.)
1977.
Available from: Motorola Teleprograms, Inc., 4825 N. Scott St., Schiller Park, IL 60176
Purchase price: $450; Rental price: $60 per week

The long-term effects of sexual abuse are illustrated in a film which shows the experiences in group therapy of 6 women who were abused as children. Their experiences provide insight into the perspective of the child who is sexually abused. Through the therapeutic experience, the women gain insight into how the abuse has influenced the patterns of their lives as adults. Therapeutic techniques for working with adults who were sexually abused as children are noted.

CA-00019
Cavalcade Productions.
The Sexually Abused Child. Identification-Interview.
color 16mm film (10 min.) or 3/4" videocassette
1978.
Available from: Motorola Teleprograms, Inc., 4825 N. Scott St., Schiller Park, IL 60176
Purchase price: $185; Rental price: $30

A teacher interview with a child suspected of being sexually abused is dramatized. The unique position of teachers to detect abuse and talk to the child alone in a nonthreatening manner is noted. Suggestions are offered for controlling one's own feelings, discussing the abuser in a noncritical manner, reassuring the child and dispelling guilt, and indicating to the child the need and benefits of reporting the incident. An instructor's guide accompanies the film.

CA-00020

A Perspective on Being a Parent.
color 16mm film (32 min.)
date unknown.
Available from: Family Life Development Center, 172 Martha Van Rensselaer Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853

The coordinator of Alliance, a screening and self-help project, presents 6 interviews with abusive and potentially abusive mothers. Problems apparent in the participants include social isolation, unfortunate childhood experiences, marital strife, poor self-image, and ill-defined life goals. The roles of the Alliance social workers and parent aides are reviewed.

CA-00022
Education Development Center, Inc., Newton, Mass.
Broken Eggs.
color 16mm film (10 min.)
1974.
Purchase available from: Exploring Childhood EDC-School and Society Programs, 55 Chapel St., Newton, MA 02160; Rental available from: EDC Distribution Center, 39 Chapel St., Newton, MA 02160
Purchase price: $121; Rental price: $10

The film depicts an incident at a preschool, in which the children flout the authority of an older student guide who has brought special eggs to show them. The children carelessly handle the eggs and upset the student, who runs from the classroom. Later the student discusses the incident with her classmates. The film provides an opportunity to examine and discuss feelings, and consider how to handle a stressful situation.

CA-00023

A Chain to Be Broken.
color 16mm film (25 min.)
1977.
Available from: FMS Productions, Inc., 1040 N. Las Palmas Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90038
Purchase price: $375; Rental price: $40 for 3 days

The etiology of child abuse and the psychological characteristics of abusers are discussed. The interdisciplinary efforts of the physician, teacher, law enforcement officer, and the community at large are explored. The importance of crisis shelters, hotlines, and parents self-help groups is stressed. Community resource organizations are presented as an effective vehicle against child abuse and neglect.

CA-00024
Franceschi Advertising, Tallahassee, Fla.
Public Awareness Television Spots on Child Abuse and Neglect.
color 16mm film (4 60 sec.; 2 30 sec.)
1976.
Available from: Franceschi Advertising, 107 West Georgia, P.O. Box 1773, Talahassee, FL 32302
Purchase price: $3500-$5500, according to market size.

A series of six television spots emphasizes the need to report child abuse and neglect cases to a statewide, toll-free child abuse hotline. The first spot (60 sec.) depicts a 3-year-old girl in a messy, unattended apartment, who shatters a bottle in the kitchen and turns on the stove. The spot ends with the child pulling a pan of hot grease toward her. The second spot (60 sec.) shows rapidly increasing computerized numbers under still photographs of children's smiles. Statistics on abuse and neglect are reported throughout until the final frame, which shows a child with a tear running down her face. A 30-second version of this spot is also available. The fourth spot (60 sec.) depicts healthy babies creeping, while the narration gives information on the numbers and types of injuries children received last year in Florida. A 30-second version of this spot is also available. The sixth spot shows a pre-teen girl clad only in a slip, sitting on the edge of her bed, crying and holding her doll. The narration reports the incidence of sexual abuse in Florida.

CA-00025
Independent Order of Foresters, Solana Beach, Calif.
Fragile: Handle With Care.
color 16mm film (26 min.)
1974.
Available from: Independent Order of Foresters, 100 Border Ave., Suite B, Solana Beach, CA 92075
Purchase price: $125; Rental price: free on request

Three actual cases of child abuse are reenacted. The film begins with the funeral of an abused child; the mother describes the incidents which led to the death. A nonpunitive approach toward the parents is stressed in the other two cases, as well as the importance of breaking the generational cycle of abuse.

CA-00026

Who Do You Tell?
color 16mm film (11 min.) or 3/4" videocassette
1977.
Available from: Motorola Teleprograms, Inc., 4825 N. Scott St., Schiller Park, IL 60176
Purchase price: $195; Rental price: $25

This animated film is intended to encourage children to talk about their problems. The family support and community support systems available to children are reviewed, and problems which may be especially difficult to discuss are noted. A live group situation is also included in which the children are asked what they would do about specific problems such as a child molester or an abused friend. A leader's guide accompanies the film.

CA-00027

My Father, My Brother, and Me.
color 16mm film (25 min.)
1977.
Available from: National Audiovisual Center, GSA, Order Section, Washington, DC 20409

Paco, the retarded son of a migrant worker in Texas runs away from home and is found by the police. The father is charged with child neglect, and a hearing is conducted. As the case proceeds, it is revealed that the father keeps the boy locked in a room during the day so that other children will not torment him. The attorneys, public officers, social workers, and Paco's sister all argue the case from their own perspectives. The court allows Paco to return to his family on the condition that they settle in one place and send the boy to a special school.

Part 1 depicts a therapist who attempts to penetrate a woman's isolation by analyzing the causes of stress in her life. Most of the woman's problems stem from her inability to ask for help, so treatment begins with the client repeating "Help me." Part 2 demonstrates how a therapist can encourage a client to examine himself from another perspective. In a situation involving a client who is unable to refrain from committing himself to excessive demands from friends and relatives, the therapist introduces a game which exaggerates demands on the client to the point of absurdity.

An actual case of family dysfunction and child abuse is depicted. A public health nurse makes a home visit where she finds a nervous, socially isolated mother of 2 small children. Indications of marital problems, estrangement from family, unrealistic expectations for the youngest child, and strong discipline in the mother's own childhood are evident. The mother often keeps the older child home from school and brings the infant to the local clinic, for no apparent physical reason, in a frustrated attempt to secure help for herself. The nonintervention of the public health nurse is noted, and physical abuse is implied following an argument with the husband.

The story of an abusive father, from infancy to parenthood, emphasizes the cyclical, generational aspects of abuse. A dramatization of the man's childhood reveals that he was the victim of inadequate mothering. Now a parent, he has unrealistic expectations about his own child, which lead to abuse when the child does not fulfill his needs. The need for effective intervention on behalf of the child is stressed. A discussion guide is included.

This 2-part program covers parenthood in a stressful society and the need to arrest the cycle of abuse and neglect. Part I presents an overview of the problem, including characteristics common to abusive parents. Part II identifies types of abuse and neglect, and considers the response of agencies in combatting the problem. High-risk children are identified and the various types of public and private helping services available are reviewed. Suggestions are offered for preventing the problem, including expanding school curricula to include parenting, increased counseling of high-risk parents, earlier identification of high-risk cases, availability of re-parenting courses for abusive parents, better interagency coordination, and increased public awareness. The generational cycle of child abuse is stressed. A teacher's manual and program script are included.

The major components of case planning are reviewed from a family and professional point of view. A case history is followed through needs assessment, treatment planning, implementation and referral, and case monitoring. The importance of differentiation between problems and needs is stressed, along with the need for consultation, case conferencing, and family involvement. Assessment of the agency responsible for treatment is emphasized. The importance of follow-up by the caseworker is also noted.

The filmstrip presents physical and behavioral indicators of abuse and neglect which children are likely to display in a school setting. Physical signs of child abuse which should promote suspicion include bruises, burns, bites, or any unusual marks. Signs of suspected neglect such as unsuitable clothing, poor hygiene, hunger, or sleepiness are depicted. Behavioral indicators such as frequent tardiness, extreme behavior, aggressiveness, passivity, or erratic behavior are presented. These signs are merely suggestions of the problem and must be further investigated. The problem of sexual abuse is also briefly discussed.

Child neglect is defined and various signs of neglect are depicted. In general, a neglect situation is indicated by threats to the child's health and refusal of assistance by the parents or caretakers. Typical signs of child neglect include abandonment, lack of preventive health care, inadequate supervision (especially of infants), inadequate and unclean clothing, the failure to thrive syndrome, poor parent-child relations, and unsafe shelter. The problem occurs at all income levels, and cultural differences must be taken into account when assessing a possible neglect situation.

The effectiveness of child abuse and neglect reporting laws and the reasons why child care professionals may be reluctant to report cases are reviewed. Interviews with Monrad Paulsen, Judge James Delaney (Adams County Court, Colo.), Talcott Bates (American Academy of Pediatrics), Elsa Ten Broeck, Judge S. White (Juvenile Court of Cook County, Ill.), Evelyn Blanchard (University of Washington), Uruyuana Trinidad (Extended Family Center, San Francisco), and Jackie Howell (Los Angeles Police Dept.) suggest ways of minimizing reporting resistance and improving the system. The origin, purpose, and basic provisions of reporting laws are briefly described.

R. E. Helfer's theory of the intergenerational, self-perpetuating cycle of child abuse and neglect is presented in a series of cartoons. Each stage of the cycle is illustrated. The abused or neglected child is unable to create a supportive network of friends, marries a partner who may have had a similar childhood, and the couple have a child to save or enhance their marriage. Inability of the child to meet the parents' expectations, isolation and need of the parents, and a crisis situation may lead to abuse, and the cycle begins again. This program is only available in New Jersey.

Available from: Ad Club II, P.O. Box 18907, Atlanta, GA 30326

The first spot shows a slow scan of a child's room. A peculiar noise is heard, the source of which is a child sitting on the floor striking matches. The message is "Child neglect. It could scar a kid for life." The second spot depicts an older couple listening to the sounds of beating and crying in a nearby apartment. They argue about getting involved, and finally call for help. The message is to report an abused child. The third spot uses a still photograph of a girl's face. The camera moves closer to the eyes and the fear and shame that accompany abuse are discussed. The need to become involved is stressed. The fourth spot shows a boy looking out a window. The camera moves closer to the eyes, while the narration discusses severe child neglect.

A series of five spots on general public awareness carries the message to get involved ("to get help or to give help, call"–). The first of the series (60 sec.) shows 2 children, ages 3 and 6, left alone in the house all day. In the second (60 sec.), a man making a sandwich in the kitchen late at night hears the crying of an infant next door, remarks to himself that the child always looks underfed, and wonders if she gets enough to eat. He says, "But that's none of my business. Or is it?" In the third (60 sec.), a small boy drawing a picture of his mother tries to reconcile his mother's striking out at him with his desire to believe that she really loves him. The fourth spot (30 sec.) shows a woman rocking in a chair and voicing her fears at being alone and of lashing out at her children in frustration and anger. In the fifth spot (30 sec.), a young Eskimo boy struggles to understand why his mother vents her hatred of her stepfather on him, when he does not resemble the man at all.

In this videotaped group discussion among 4 abused adolescents and a counselor, the 4 recount their experiences and emphasize the importance of having someone to talk to and someplace to go to get away from the abusive home situation. One was physically abused by her alcoholic mother; another was sexually abused by her alcoholic stepfather. The third was kept in total isolation by her father for months at a time. They all had feelings of helplessness and of somehow deserving the maltreatment. The unedited, graphic language and descriptions of the victims' experiences make this program suitable for training professionals who deal with adolescents.

Identification in School-Aged Children.
b&w 3/4" videocassette (13 min.)
1977.
Available from: Family Resource Center, 8016 Zuni, SE, Albuquerque, NM 87108

The program reviews types of abuse common among school children, signs that indicate nonaccidental injury, characteristics of abusive parents, and the behavior of abused children. It is noted that in this age group abuse is often the result of disciplining the child, and sexual abuse is more prevalent than reported. A precaution to remain calm and objective when dealing with suspected abusive parents is stressed, especially in cases of suspected adolescent abuse where the tendency to identify with the parents may exist.

Available from: Family Resource Center, 8016 Zuni, SE, Albuquerque, NM 87108

Types of physical abuse, clues to nonaccidental injury, characteristics of abusive parents, and behavior characteristics of abused infants are described. A doctor explains possible signs of abuse, which include head injuries, bruises, lacerations, fractures, burns, sexual abuse, and the failure to thrive syndrome; photos of each accompany the discussion. An emergency room admission is dramatized, which illustrates detached, inappropriate behavior on the part of the mother. Officers are urged to remain calm and suppress feelings of anger when dealing with the parents of suspected abused infants.

Available from: National College of District Attorneys, College of Law, University of Houston, Houston, TX 77004

A historical overview of failure to thrive in institutionalized children is provided, and the discovery in 1957 that it is a medical, as well as social, problem is noted. A high index of suspicion is necessary for a diagnosis of nonorganic failure to thrive, and the need for accurate reporting during the history-taking procedure is stressed in order to determine whether the cause is organic or nonorganic. Characteristics of nonorganic failure-to-thrive children include general inactivity, lack of response, rumination, infant posturing in children older than 4 months, and poor gross motor development. The case history of a 10-month-old child is reported, and his characteristics and interactions with others depicted. The need to counsel and educate the parents of nonorganic failure-to-thrive children is noted, as well as the possibility of removing the child from his home environment.

Statistics on the incidence of child abuse and neglect are noted, and the essential role of the physician in identifying abuse is stressed. Definitions are provided of physical, emotional, and sexual abuse, and physical and emotional neglect. Factors contributing to abuse include the parent's potential to abuse, perception of the child as special, lack of a lifeline for parents, and a crisis situation or a series of crises. Signs which indicate abuse are unexplained injuries, variations in explanations of injury, and delays in obtaining care. Several case histories are cited and the failure-to-thrive syndrome is discussed. The use of the Denver Developmental Screening Test in testing development and maturation is described.

Purchase price: $50

The first spot, dealing with emotional neglect, states that loneliness is a form of child abuse, and emphasizes that children need adults. The second spot asks what it is like to be a child and live in a world of giants. The message conveyed is to be a kind and protective adult. The third spot concerns victims of physical, sexual, and emotional abuse, and stresses that abuse occurs even though most parents want to be good parents. The message is that each child is everyone's child, and children need protection. The fourth spot begins with a child staring into space and then shows several photographs of young women. The hurt that child abuse causes the child and the potential danger it poses to society are implied. The fifth spot acknowledges the difficulties of being a parent and urges understanding between parents and children. The final photograph shows a happy family group.

At the 1973 Fall Workshop of the Illinois Child Care Association, held on September 28-29 in Champaign, Vincent DeFrancis discussed the history of child protective services, the definitions of abuse and neglect, the rights of parents and children, the characteristics of abusive parents, mandatory reporting, and the Mondale Bill before Congress. Four convictions regarding child abuse were related: children are defenseless and must be protected; when families fail to provide protection, responsibility shifts to government; child abuse and neglect are the result of parental inadequacies rather than a willful act; and given help, parents can become good, responsible caregivers. The need for more services and interagency cooperation is stressed.

A comprehensive course on child abuse and neglect consists of a 12-unit core curriculum for uni- or multidisciplinary training audiences, and a 4-unit specialized curriculum for social workers, medical and health professionals, educators, and law enforcement professionals. The core curriculum, designed to last approximately 35 hours, consists of 2 sequences: the identification sequence, which examines types of maltreatment, factors that contribute to abuse and neglect, and legal and operational definitions that promote identification; and the community response sequence, which examines procedures for responding to suspected cases of child abuse and neglect. A training manual that outlines program objectives is available for each unit. Nineteen films and filmstrips are utilized throughout the curriculum.

Guidelines for conducting a curriculum on child abuse and neglect are presented. Suggested activities include a large group meeting, group interchange with the trainer, an experiential exercise to acquaint the trainees with each other, 2 lectures, and a film, "Working Together" (Abstract CA-00048). The lectures explain program objectives and give an overview of the problem of child abuse and neglect, including the needs of children, definitions of child abuse and neglect, characteristics of abusive or neglectful individuals, institutional abuse, and the incidence and sequelae of child abuse and neglect. The intended length of this program is 2 hours and 40 minutes.

Case planning and referral in cases of child abuse and neglect are examined. A lecture and a filmstrip, "Case Planning and Referral" (Abstract CA-00081), introduce the unit and describe assessment, treatment planning, and case monitoring or management. A role-playing episode is suggested so that trainees may explore the multidisciplinary team approach to dealing with a physically abusive family. Following the episode, the contributions of each professional on the team are examined. The unit requires 3 hours and 20 minutes.

A 4-part training unit is intended to increase the social work professional's knowledge of and skills in the investigation process. Legal issues in child abuse and neglect, and the processes of social assessment and case planning are reviewed. The modules explore the initial investigation processes, the court system and trial preparation, processes involved in determining social assessment, and the development of a treatment plan. Sample cases are provided to simulate actual working experiences for the trainees. The film, "Presenting the Case" (Abstract CA-00148), accompanies the program, which lasts approximately 19 hours and 35 minutes.

The program is divided into 3 modules. Presentations in module 1 cover the responsibilities of law enforcement, definitions of child abuse and neglect, reporting laws, the juvenile court approach, criminal child abuse and neglect laws, and the child protective service approach to child abuse and neglect cases. The film, "Abusive Parents" (Abstract CA-00038) is shown followed by a discussion of the propriety of criminal prosecutions for child abuse. Module 2 involves viewing and discussing 4 filmstrips on the identification of child abuse and neglect: "Physical Indicators of Abuse, Signs of Alert" (Abstract CA-00090); "Physical Abuse: What Behavior Can Tell Us" (Abstract CA-00089); "Identifying Neglect: Before It's Too Late" (Abstract CA-00083); and "Medical Indicators of Child Abuse and Neglect: Part 5. Sexual Abuse" (Abstract CA-00088). Module 3 reviews the investigation process, including receiving the report, searching the central registry, gaining entry to the home, placing a child in protective custody, gathering and evaluating evidence, interviewing parents and children, and facilitating the final disposition of the case. The trainees view a film on police and child protective service investigations, "Investigating Reports of Child Abuse and Neglect" (Abstract CA-00044), and develop interviewing skills by participating in an interview role play. The program requires 15 hours to complete.

This program is designed for those health professionals who do not hold M.D. degrees, such as nurses, laboratory and x-ray technicians, health therapists, ward clerks, and selected hospital volunteers. It is similar to the physician's program, and is concerned with the identification of child abuse and neglect, legal processes in abuse and neglect cases, and the professional's role in dealing with such cases. The following audiovisual materials are intended to be used with this module: "Borderline Case: Initial Conference" (Abstract CA-00055), "Mother-Infant Interaction" (Abstract CA-00037), and "Medical Identification of Child Abuse and Neglect for Non-Physicians" (Abstract CA-00095). The program focuses on increasing the effectiveness of psychiatrists, clinical social workers, psychologists, counselors, and clinical paraprofessionals in the treatment of abusing families. Specific therapeutic techniques necessary for the development of treatment plans and practices are demonstrated. The development of successful working models is a major goal of the program as well as an increase in awareness of early identification, treatment, and preventive measures when child abuse is a potential risk. Practice in the use of new knowledge, awareness, and therapeutic skills is obtained through a peer consultation model. The elements of the training program are: identification and diagnosis, reporting and legal outcomes, coordination and case management, treatment, prevention and support, and peer consultation. The following audiovisual materials are intended to be used with this module: "The Social Context of Child Abuse," "Child Abuse Materials: Excerpts from Response Modes-Affect Simulation: Vignettes," "Borderline Case: Initial Conference" (Abstract CA-00055), "Case Conference (Including Parents)" (Abstract CA-00056), "Treatment Techniques Sampler: Simulated Vignettes" (Abstracts CA-00057–CA-00058, CA-00060–CA-00063), "Mother-Infant Interaction" (Abstract CA-00037), and "Medical Identification of Child Abuse and Neglect for Non-Physicians" (Abstract CA-00095). The program is designed to impress upon indirect service providers the importance of and need for child abuse and neglect programs. The major goals of the program are to increase understanding of the problems of child abuse, provide knowledge and an understanding of the services that are necessary, and encourage the coordination of existing services. An optional follow-up workshop is intended to foster these goals by providing models and motivation for the development of additional services where service gaps exist. The following audiovisual materials are intended to be used with this module: "The Social Context of Child Abuse," "Principles of Medical Identification" (Abstract CA-00105), and "Community Models" (Abstract CA-00102). The program lasts approximately 1 day.

The Art of the Crisis Line for Child Abuse Prevention.
audiocassette (30 min.); manual 1976.
Available from: Parental Stress Service, 154 Santa Clara Ave., Oakland, CA 94610
Purchase price: $8

A training program for volunteers for the Parental Stress Service crisis line covers orientation, identification of high risk, telephone counseling, legal aspects, confidentiality, child development, treatment, referrals and resources, and office procedures. An audiocassette presents simulations of 4 types of telephone calls received by parental stress crisis lines. Side one deals with a crisis call from a mother who has struck her 1-year-old son who wets his bed, and a follow-up call to see how the original advice was followed. Side two includes a third party call from a woman about a friend who hit her 2-month-old baby, and a stress call from a woman who is frustrated with her youngest daughter, aged 4.

Health Module.
synchronized color slides-audiocassette (45 min.); manuals (30 pp.; 5 pp.) 1976.
Available from: Region VII Child Abuse and Neglect Resource Center, Institute of Child Behavior and Development, University of Iowa, Oakdale, IA 52319

An overview of child abuse and neglect is presented, including medical aspects, legal aspects, physical indicators, emotional abuse, sexual abuse, and neglect. Behavioral characteristics of parents and children are noted for each aspect. The need for early warning indicators to be accompanied by physical signs is discussed, as well as tests necessary to determine a diagnosis of child abuse. Suggestions are offered for interviewing children in sexual abuse cases. Treatment modes available to children, parents, and families are reviewed. The emphasis in treatment on breaking the cycle of abuse is stressed. A case history of successful treatment is recounted.

Family Aides to Battering Parents Training Package.

16mm film (31 min.); 15 slides; manual (45 pp.)

1973.

Available from: Trikon Productions, P.O. Box 21, La Jolla, CA 92038

Purchase price: $285; Rental price: $35

This package was developed to train volunteer homemakers to work with professionally staffed child abuse service organizations. The training manual provides an overview of the problem of child abuse, the background and history of child abuse, and guidelines for conducting the 16-hour training program. The slides depict types of child abuse, the types of parents predisposed to battering, events precipitating battering, symptoms which suggest a diagnosis of battering, and pediatric and nonpediatric management of battered children. The film "Women of Valor" (Abstract CA-00071) is also included in the package.

Child Protective Service Program.

curriculum (4 units)

1977.

Available from: Child Protective Service Training and Research Project, Health Sciences Learning Resources Center, T-252, University of Washington, Seattle, WA 98195

This training program for protective service workers comprises 4 modules covering the caseworker's role in relation to general intervention policy, the juvenile court system, investigation and reporting task analysis, and community resources utilization on behalf of the client. The modules include training manuals, audio and videocassettes, and slides.

color 3/4" videocassette (28 min.); manual

1977.

Available from: Child Protective Service Training and Research Project, Health Sciences Learning Resources Center, T-252, University of Washington, Seattle, WA 98195

This two-part training tape provides guidelines for protective service workers on investigating and reporting child abuse cases. The first section discusses standards and the resources available to child protection service workers. The second section simulates a typical case and shows the correct way to deal with problems and situations which may arise.

1977.

Available from: Child Protective Service Training and Research Project, Health Sciences Learning Resources Center, T-252, University of Washington, Seattle, WA 98195

Multi-media training sessions, designed for 6 to 9 people and estimated to last 7 hours, focus on the juvenile court system and caseworker interaction with that system. A composite of the juvenile court system in Washington is depicted, and an overview of each type of hearing within the juvenile court system is presented. Flow charts assist participants in creating a composite of their own region's legal system. A simple data collection and recording system is recommended to establish a log of events in a case and to facilitate the completion of various forms. Separating observation from opinion or conclusion is emphasized. Effective communications strategies are recommended, and direct and cross-examination techniques are examined in a 2-part simulation of a fact finding hearing in a neglect case. A glossary of terms, an exercise in filing a petition for a juvenile court hearing, and a recommended reading list are included.

2 slide-audiocassettes (6 min.; 9 min.); videotape; manual (70 pp.)
1977.
Available from: University of Washington Health Sciences Learning Resources Center, T-252 Health Sciences, Seattle, WA 98195

Legal, social, psychological, and medical aspects of child abuse and neglect are presented. The philosophy of child protective services is reviewed, with emphasis on the nonpunitive and rehabilitative approach. Common types of abuse-related injuries are described. Detailed information is provided on normal developmental patterns to enable workers to compare information from a case with normal development or accidental injuries. The slide-tape presents medical indicators of child abuse and neglect, and the videotape illustrates normal motor development in the first year of life.

Dessie: A Dramatic Program on Child Abuse.
play (1 hr. 15 min.)
1975.
Available from: The Independent Eye, 1020 N. Austin, Oak Park, IL 60302
Rental price: $200-300, lodging, child care

The play depicts an abusive mother whose 5-year-old son has been removed from the home. Insight is provided into the emotional confrontations facing an abusive parent, which may include isolation, poor self-esteem, job dissatisfaction, and poor interpersonal relationships. The performance is followed by a discussion which enables the audience to share their reactions and feelings. A videotaped version of the play is available for preview.

CA-00354
Martha Bramhall Associates, Silver Spring, Md.
Burn-Out Workshop.
workshop (1 or 2 days)
1978.
Available from: Martha Bramhall Associates, 9119 Manchester Rd., Silver Spring, MD 20901
Purchase price: Price subject to group size

Workshops on the prevention and treatment of burnout try to teach social service workers to avoid emotional exhaustion. A one-day workshop concentrates on diagnosis and prevention or on diagnosis and treatment. A 2-day version covers all 3 topics and includes 4 large group sessions and 4 smaller group meetings. Information is exchanged and shared within these group sessions. The workshops teach participants to recognize and cope with unproductive behavior, and to achieve increased self knowledge, increased coping skills, and improved relationships with co-workers. Prevention of burnout involves re-evaluating one's personal and professional relationships. At the conclusion of each workshop the participant develops an individual anti-burnout plan incorporating time-management and group-support systems.

PRODUCER INDEX

This index lists alphabetically the organizations that produced the audiovisual materials. The producer names conform to the COSATI Standard for Descriptive Cataloging of Government Scientific and Technical Reports. If two or more organizations co-produced an item, they both appear in the Index. When two or more audiovisual item titles are listed under a producer's name, they are listed in accession number order.
